This article will introduce the basics of editing images in Photoshop. Image Editing in Photoshop In Photoshop, editing images is done in layers. Layers are bitmaps that are stacked one on top of the other. Photoshop enables editing and manipulation of layers by using the Layers window and the Layer tools. As with other image editing programs, Photoshop's Layers window displays a collection of toolbars and icons that enable editing various aspects of an image's content. The Layers window is split into four sections, each containing the tools shown in the diagram. Each of the tools in the Layers window works with only a single layer at a time, which must be selected in order to be able to edit that layer. The tools, however, affect all the layers in the image, as each tool has a drop-down menu to allow editing of all layers in the image. Image in Photoshop's Layers window Photo by Matthew Roth / The Matador Network Layer tools Following is a list of the different tools available in Photoshop's Layers window: Layer | Tooltip --- | --- Lock | Locks the layer, preventing other editing tools from affecting that layer. Lock | Prevents the layer from being modified by other layers. Isolation Mask | Opens the Layer Isolation panel to enable you to draw a selection. Smart Sharpen | Provides a basic sharpening tool. Lighten | Lowers the opacity of the layer and applies a light gradient. Darken | Raises the opacity of the layer and applies a dark gradient. Invert | Changes the color of the layer and makes it appear black and white. Hue/Saturation | Gives the layer a strong color effect. Color | Changes the color of the layer and makes it a specific color. Saturation | Increases the contrast in a layer and applies a light color effect. Curves | Adds curves to the layer. Levels | Adds a contrast adjustment to the layer. Tint | Changes the layer color and applies a specific color effect. Gradient Map | Applies a color gradient to the layer. Shadow | Adds a black and white effect to the layer. Luminance | Makes the image darker or lighter. Curves | Applies a luminance adjustment to the layer. Curves

[Clinical and neuropathologic study of encephalitis. I. Clinical and laboratory study of the 205 cases]. The clinical and laboratory characteristics of 205 cases of encephalitis in the Nenadovski District are reported. Encephalitis is one of the commonest causes of morbidity in the district, and is a cause of serious neurological problems in our country. The etiology of the disease is unknown and no effective therapy has been established. Out of the 205 cases studied 32 (15.8%) have been found to have no etiology. The cases of the 205 were collected in a prospective study during a period of 10 years. The age of the patients ranged from 1 to 78 years (mean age 21.73 years). The female-to-male ratio was 1:1.35. Enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) was used for the detection of specific antibodies, and a direct immunofluorescence test (DIFT) was used for the detection of certain specific antigen and antibody from the cerebrospinal fluid (CSF). In all cases (100%) the diagnosis of encephalitis was confirmed by the results of clinical examination, neurophysiological investigations and CSF examination. Only in 28% (n = 59) of the cases was an etiology established with the assistance of results of the CSF examination. Out of the 205 cases 50 (24.8%) were associated with varicella-zoster. More than 60% of the cases were caused by encephalitides of unknown etiology. Varicella-zoster was detected as an etiological agent in 2 cases.. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a silica-based insulating glass sheet material which is superior in alkali durability and weathering resistance. 2. Description of the Related Art As a conventional silica-based insulating glass sheet material, there have been known a glass sheet material which has been treated with a coating layer containing a polysilazane, and an electrodeposition coating layer containing a polysilazane, respectively (Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication (KOKAI) Nos. 11-309588 and 11-331640). The above glass sheet material is superior in alkali durability and weathering resistance, but involves a problem in alkali durability because the glass sheet material lacks alkali resistance. In order to improve alkali durability, there has been known a technique to increase the content of alkali ingredients in the coating layer. However, such a technique has had a tendency to excessively lower the strength of the coating layer. Also, when the coating layer is formed on the glass sheet material in an electrodeposition process, it is necessary to form an electric field so as to deposit the coating layer, which leads to an environmental pollution problem, and thus requires the use of an apparatus which is large in size. There has been known a method to coat a glass sheet material with a coating layer containing a silicone resin (U.S. Pat. No. 6,030,344). The silicone resin has an advantage in that, in comparison with a coating layer containing a polysilazane, it can be formed on a glass sheet material in an ordinary wet process and, since the silicone resin is made up of a hydrolysate of a polysiloxane, it has high alkali durability and weathering resistance. When the coating layer containing a silicone resin is coated on the glass sheet material, however, a silicone component contained in the silicone resin is required to be eluted to the glass surface in a heat treatment, and this silicone component is liable to stain the glass sheet material. As a result, there has been encountered a problem that the appearance of the glass sheet material is deteriorated. In a superscalar or out-of-order machine with multiple pipelines executing instructions, it may be advantageous to swap an instruction in one pipeline with an instruction in another pipeline to increase the instruction issue rate of the superscalar or out-of-order machine. This may be referred to as "inter-pipelining." ◆
